What's Wrong," with the colon after it, which we supply after both Frederick Ballard, the author, and David Belasco, the producer, overlooked it in the confusion of producing the piece on the stage at the National last night. is a diagnesis, in addition to being a

The colon is important because many people think the title lacks a question mark. It does not. Mr. Ballard has placed himself in the position of a lecturer at a clinic. He has a great deal to say on the subject he has chosen for the lecture. He desires to make every word and every action count. He, therefore, discords all superlatives in his title and starts his play.

Considered as a clinical diagnosis of Americanitis, the name being supplied by Mr. Ballard, the production is successful.

cessful. There is not a moment in the first and second act when the fact that the average business man in this country is speeding himself into premature senile debility in his client to acquire money is not uppermost in the minds of every person in the audience.

Feel the Excitement.

So plain is the situation that the business men in the audience partook strongly of the excitement under which the land-so ling-chicken-farming hero was laboring. The chicken farm secend act was slightly less intense in its effect on the audience-just slightly The third act-where the wife and baby treatment has affected a complete cure for the speed mania. shows an entire reversal of the other two. It sends the audience home in the frame of mind or the patient has been told by the coctor that he is suffering from a highly dangerous complication of diseases, a complication that might, at any moment caus his collapse and death, and then is told that it isn't necessarily fatal, and that if he'll follow the physician's advice, complete restoration to health it not only possible, but necessarily posi-tive. So much for the diagnosis. As a piay, Frederick Ballard nas dramatized nervous prostration, David Belasco staged it in a "sister" act with a real honest-to-goodness chicken farm, and Janet Beecher adds human intelligence to such a point that the neurasthenic is cured, the chicken

If direct, straight-fromthe-shoulder facts coming over the fortlights with the rapidity of machine gun fire, play any part in successes—the play ought to be a wonder. Objection might be made that the author has attempted to do too much in the space of time allowed him. But there is nothing illogical about any of it, though a bit crowded and full of short cuts. GAYETY

One of the best burlesque shows of terday of the two audiences that saw the Bon Ton Butlesquers in "My Wife's Husband. The show is elaborately staged and costumed, and is presented a large and capable company. Bert Haker and Babe LaTour are the stars, and their work is much above the averaze. As Adam Jellyfish, a gay old Baymond, who plays Jeremiah Noodles, clever assistant. For vivacity it with the chorus was one of the of the show. Lucile Manion and trosby sing delightfully and bandsome gowns. Several vaude ille numbers are given, including cosber and Allen, in songs; Feeley nd Kelly, grotesque tumblers; Bert taker, in his specialty, "A Typical Tad," and Feeley and Miss McCloud, in original dances. COLUMBIA

"Bunty," that pioneer suffragist, feminist, and household efficiency ex. pert, pulled the strings last night at the Columbia Theater to the intense and oft-expressed satisfaction of an audience largely made up of faculty. students, and friends of George Wasnington University. Thus Bunty added, to her other financial achievements, that of making up the rull athletic fund debt of that institution.

Time cannot stale Bunty's infinite vaof resources for all occasions, her quaint charm, mingled with hard common sense, was adequately conveyed by Miss Violet Heminy. Everett Butterfield was seen to advant-age as Rab, the impetuous son of the severe Tammas Biggar, and Rab's chafing against the Sunday restrictions on whistling created the usual sympathy for him.

Earle Brown conveyed the satire of Weelum Sprunt and John M. Kline made a sufficiently stern Tammas Big-gar. Miss Julia Blanc seemed a bit more militant than even the dour role of Susie Simpson demanded, but the gloom that character left was sufriciently lightened by Mss Jessie Glen-dening's winsome presentment of Teenie Dunlop. Miss Giendening met every exaction of the role except the qualification as to size suggested by Miss Dunlop's given name, but for that she hardly could be plamed she hardly could be blamed.

An excellent character part fell to George Barbier, in Jeems Gibbs, while Willard Robertson was seen briefly, but in a good role, as the village po. leeman. Miss Carrie Thatcher was Eelen Duniop, the erstwhile sweetheart who Tam Laggar left waiting at the church in his earlier days, and Miss Marie Drofnah had the presentment of the village gossip, who did not hesitate to faint, to get herself to the scene of action.

COSMOS

Joe Maxwell's Players, in Carrington Phelps' play, "The Stool Pigeon," at the Cosmos Theater yesterday afternoon and last night, won several curtain calls at each performance. Morris and Campbell, in "Almost a Soldier," a man and woman sketch full of new and man and woman sketch full of new and funny repartee and novel songs, really made the hit of the bill.
